

2.29.2004: Newsletter Out

The newsletter is out, and thanks to Shaolin, it is also available in PDF. Thanks everyone who contributed, and happy reading.

1.28.2004: Good News in the Offline World

Before I get some ZZZs, I wanted to briefly congratulate and recognize Simon, alias =]ZT[=Sydecutz-TrC on his recent engagement. Along with a belated congrats to ~PM~Mayhem, both of these individuals have proven that they are firm supporters of our community and its surroundings. I'm sure I speak on behalf of everyone when I send my best regards to the both of you. Simon, otherwise unofficially designated as the clown of our community, has always brought a humorous edge to our place here and we are certainly glad to have him as a part of our online lives. Mayhem's diplomatic approach to a variety of dilemmas is also worthy of recognition. And hey man, we expect FULL reports and details when your special day comes! So, to the future newly-wed couples, may your days be filled with happiness, laughter, and booze!

1.23.2004: Newsletter Possibility

I won't go into an enormous amount of depth here because this is a project in the working but basically we've decided to launch a community newsletter. There has been talk about this before and we have just decided that this possibility is more of a probable event. Anyone is free to submit an article through their own free will, and we will have various sections. If you have any suggestions whatsoever as to what should be included in the newsletter, PM a staff member. There is no set length on an article other than to say that an article that is merely one or two sentences long won't be included. As usual, use common sense when writing this. Your article may also be edited for grammar, typos, or spelling.

Lastly, Omnious has set up a forum user online day scheduled for tomorrow at 8:30. Be there only if you can! This is purely for fun. We will be in the chatter box in that time, so post away. These posts might be deleted after the day is over, but they will most likely be up for a while for our pure amusement.

1.6.2004: A "Small" Notice

First off, the member list has been taken down for various reasons. However, we will list our admins and staff members on the admin page. K4rpm4n from Fatal Guns has stated the following: "The clan isn't really dead if you ask me personally. Our sponsor, Interstate Computers Incorporated, is taking longer then expected getting a server for the Fatal Guns clan." While quite a few FG members have left for other clans, those wanting to remain on board are more than welcome to. Krazed Alloys will of course stick with [FG] even if K4rpm4n has to start anew.

1.5.2004: A Long Awaited Update

To tell you the truth, I don't even know where to begin. For starters, I hope the holiday season was awesome for everyone, and that all of your new year's resolutions become a reality. With everyone's lives now slowly returning to normal, hopefully the community can run again on the same terms as it did before with a lot of traffic. The server is now usually always populated during the afternoons and this is certainly a welcoming change that we look forward to. I would especially like to thank P228 and former FG members for bringing a positive atmosphere to our server.

On a dimmer note, I'd like to acknowledge clan Fatal Guns who has been a loyal affiliate of ours. Sometime during the holidays, Clan [FG] has put an end to the clan for reasons that I cannot really speculate on. Krazed Alloys has known clan Fatal Guns since the very beginning, and we have both grown significantly together with the help of each other. Its former leaders, k4rpm4n, scar-face, and spaz have packed their bags and called it quits. K4rpm4n and spaz continue to have high goals for any clan that they are a part of and of course we at Krazed Alloys send them our best regards, wherever their new home may be. Scar-face has taken on a staff member position as our coordinator for community members of the month and we are very happy to have him on board!

For those members in KA who are now looking for a clan, you still have many options. If you want KA's recommendations, you'd be best off joining an affiliate of ours: P228 for purely pubbing purposes (West based) or Project Mayhem for league experience. I would also suggest people take the time to visit Zero Tolerance's website as well. With active forums and basically the same rules as ours (with a few specifics changed), you will find friendly people who share our philosophy on gameplay much like our other fully affiliated organizations. Please note: Dual clanning is not permitted with any of our affiliates per their rules.

Lastly, Krazed Alloy's neighboring ally Team rem1x Community is always welcoming new members to the fray! Otherwise known as "Comedy Central", please take the time to visit their forums, sign up, and post. They have always been quick to welcome Krazed Alloys members or any other person for that matter who is willing to show due respect, and we are here to reciprocate and support them whenever possible.

12.16.2003: Christmas & Community News

First off, a bunch of things have been happening in Krazed Alloys. For starters, I recently advertised our community at counter-strike.net, a thread called "Krazed Alloys Community" - and a lot of new registered users have popped up since then. I am very thrilled to see this growth, and hopefully these new faces will post once in a while and drop by to say hello. To reiterate, we are always looking for new additions to our community, and you need not be dedicated (you set how much time you wish to devote to the community) however we do ask that you possess a positive, mature, and respectful attitude at ALL times. No "he started it first" or "I never get my way" type of phrases - leave that sort of attitude at the door or don't come in at all.

Secondly, recently celebrated birthday's include j3st3r, desolator, and =]ZT[=Shaolin's son Young Grasshopper! Happy birthday to all, and it is our hope that your wishes come true. On a last note, I may not always be "visible" in the server however rest assured I do from time to time play under a hidden alias and such. This does not mean that when I or no other admin is on, that you are free to do whatever you want! Effective tomorrow, I will be in Hawaii and I probably won't be able to devote as much time to the community in the next two weeks. I will be active in the forums, and I would like to request that any/all admins who play on WNFZ at their leisure: please enforce rules.

12.9.2003: Future Members of the Month

We already announced our member of the month before and it was =]ZT[=Pathfinder. For those of you who may or may not know, we might be adding in some benefits depending on the member of the month as well as his or her affiliated clan. If KA staff feels like they know the clan well enough, there is a possibility, and I stress that there is only a possibility...that we might chip in a few bucks toward that clan's funds. However this also depends on the availability of funds as well as how well we feel that clan also deserves those extra bucks. As for members of the month themselves, we stress that they will be able to have their own section entirely to them, however this is at their discretion. We will not force anyone to write anything about themselves... plain and simple. This just gives them the opportunity to say a few things, and is our way of giving credit where it is due!

12.1.2003: Pathfinder from Zero Tolerance

As promised, Krazed Alloys is pleased to announce its community member of the month. It was certainly not an easy task to pick one, and only one member, per month from Krazed Alloys as there are many people who are deserving. While there are many attributes from each member in our community that we value with high regard, in light of recent events =]ZT[=Pathfinder has shown a tremendous amount of support for Krazed Alloys as a member, friend, and server admin. He has gone beyond the expectations set by the minimum rules of compliance in all organizations he is a part of, not to mention backing up KA's staff in countless issues. Along with members from clan P228, Project Mayhem, Fatal Guns, and former Remix, Pathfinder's affiliated clan Zero Tolerance has established itself as a well rounded player base that is full of the utmost respect and maturity to all those who are willing to reciprocate.

Even under the most stressful of times, Pathfinder has shown a genuine willingness to help out where possible, post his thoughts, and convey in a brief but courteous manner his thoughts on the controversial issues. For that, as well as his fellow clan mates and comrades, it has and continues to be a privilege to have Pathfinder as a part of Krazed Alloys.

"Syde Note:" Sydecutz from Team Remix Community has posted a similar note on Remix's website. Please check out the previous news announcement in the month of November regarding the dual tag of TrC and Krazed Alloys.
